SOG SUMMER SCHOOL 2014

PARLIAMENTARY DEMOCRACY IN EUROPE

ROME 14-25 JULY 2014

3rd Edition
The Europeanisation of National Parliaments

Since the onset of the European integration process, national parliaments have been continuously adjusting their traditional functions, organization and role. The increasing influence of EU policy-making in the domestic arena – usually labelled as Europeanisation – redefines the scope and limits of national legislation, as well as the structure of political competition.

LUISS SCHOOL OF GOVERNMENT

THE EUROPEANISATION OF NATIONAL PARLIAMENTS

PROGRAM (14-25 July 2014)

The first week, from 14 to 18 July 2014, on "National Parliaments in a Europeanised Institutional System", is more 'political science-oriented' and is divided into six sessions addressing the following subject areas:

- How much legislation comes from Europe? From Delors's prediction to practice
- The Europeanisation of the internal organisation of national parliaments
- The effect of Europeanisation on national governance and inter-institutional balance.
- The subsidiarity ex ante review as a tool of Europeanisation of national parliaments
- The Europeanisation of the power to amend the Constitution
- The Europeanisation of national political parties and parliamentary groups.

The second week, from 21 to 25 July 2014, on "The Europeanisation of Rules and Functions of National Parliaments", is more 'law-oriented' and is divided into six sessions addressing the following subject areas:

- The Europeanisation of the national forms of government.
- How Europeanisation affects parliamentary transparency and accountability
- The Europeanisation of law-making at national level
- The Europeanisation of Member State's Legal System Through Approximation of Laws
- National parliaments and the new European economic governance
- The Europeanisation of regional parliaments

Students can opt for the two weeks or one week course.
