ICON·S Mission Statement

We invite you to join the newly established International Society of Public Law (ICON·S).

- Why create a new international learned society – are there not enough already?
- Why public law – if we typically teach Constitutional Law, Administrative Law, or International Law (and now the much à la mode Global Law)?
- And why does the word “comparative” not feature in the title of the new Society? Surely if we bring together constitutionalists from, say, Japan and Canada or administrative lawyers from Italy and Turkey – their common language will be Comparative Law?

The initiative to create an International Society of Public Law emerged from the Editorial Board of I·CON – the International Journal of Constitutional Law. For several years now I·CON has been, both by choice and pursuant to the cartographic reality of the field, much more than a journal of comparative constitutional Law. I·CON has expanded its interests, range of authors, readers, Editorial Board members and, above all, issues covered, to include not only discrete articles in fields such as Administrative Law, Global Constitutional Law, Global Administrative Law and the like, but also – and increasingly so – scholarship that reflects both legal reality and academic perception; scholarship which, in dealing with the challenges of public life and governance, combines elements from all of the above with a good dose of political theory and social science.

True, in our classrooms we still teach “con. law”, “ad. law” and “int. law” separately – with some justification: they retain their reality and, heuristically, one has to start somewhere. But in litigation and jurisprudence, lawmaking and academic reflection, the boundaries between these disciplines and the borders between the national and the transnational – and even global – have become porous, indeed so porous that at times one is actually dealing with an AltNeuland of public law.

We are certainly not announcing the death of Constitutional Law or Administrative Law and the comparative variants of both. But at a minimum, a full explication and understanding of today’s “constitutional” cannot take place in isolation from other branches of public law or in a context that is exclusively national. The same is true for these other branches too. Public law, as a field of knowledge that transcends these dichotomies, thus deserves our renewed intellectual attention. Our German colleagues, who have always had a more holistic approach to public law, may smile with some satisfaction.

In the same vein, the divide between law and political science has become porous too. Some of the finest insights on public law come from social scientists deeply cognizant of law; also, is there any legal scholarship that does not make at least some use of the theoretical and empirical understandings and methodologies external to the legal discipline, stricto sensu?

What then of “Comparative Law”? Are we announcing the death of the field? Perhaps not of the field, but of the word. The field is flourishing. It is possible to think of the field of Public Law in Chomskyan terms: there is a surface language, which differs from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, but there is also a deeper structure that is common to the phenomenon of public law. It is difficult to find a public law scholar whose work is not “comparative” in some respects: informed by the theoretical discussion of X or Y in another jurisdiction; referring – often by way of contrast, sometimes by way of similarity – to a foreign leading case somewhere else as in “this is the Marbury v Madison of our legal system”; addressing universal themes of constitutional theory or design; or simply searching for a constitutional “best practice” overseas. Like Monsieur Jourdain who discovered to his astonishment that he was speaking prose, we in the field of public law should not be surprised to discover that in one way or another we are all comparativists. To limit our new Society to those scholars whose work is explicitly “comparative” would be hugely constricting and would limit many valuable conversations that go well beyond the formally comparative.

Learned societies have often been founded to validate the emergence, autonomy, or breakaway of an intellectual endeavor. By contrast, international learned societies are often driven by the realization of intellectual cross-fertilization that can stem from disciplinary ecumenism. ICON·S is both! We believe that there is a compelling case for the establishment of an International Society of Public Law predicated on these sensibilities – a new breakaway field, the content of which respects traditional categories yet rejects an excessive division of intellectual labor that no longer mirrors reality.

We are inviting all interested scholars and practitioners – from both law and the social sciences – to formally become Charter Members of the new Society by registering online here. The regular Membership Fee is $95 ($50 for scholars from non-OECD countries and students), and covers not only membership of the Society, but also the Registration Fee for the Inaugural Conference and an online subscription to I·CON—the International Journal of Constitutional Law—for one year.

Welcome to ICON·S!

Venues and Transportation

Palazzo Vecchio

Address: Piazza della Signoria 1, 50122 Florence, Italy

The Palazzo Vecchio is the city hall of Florence and can be easily reached by foot from anywhere in the city centre. Palazzo Vecchio is situated in Piazza della Signoria, in the heart of Florence.

The Conference will take place in the magnificent Salone dei Cinquecento ("Room of the 500"), adorned with beautiful paintings and a ceiling made up of 39 panels designed and painted by Vasari.

University of Florence, Novoli Campus

Address: Via delle Pandette 32, 50127 Florence, Italy

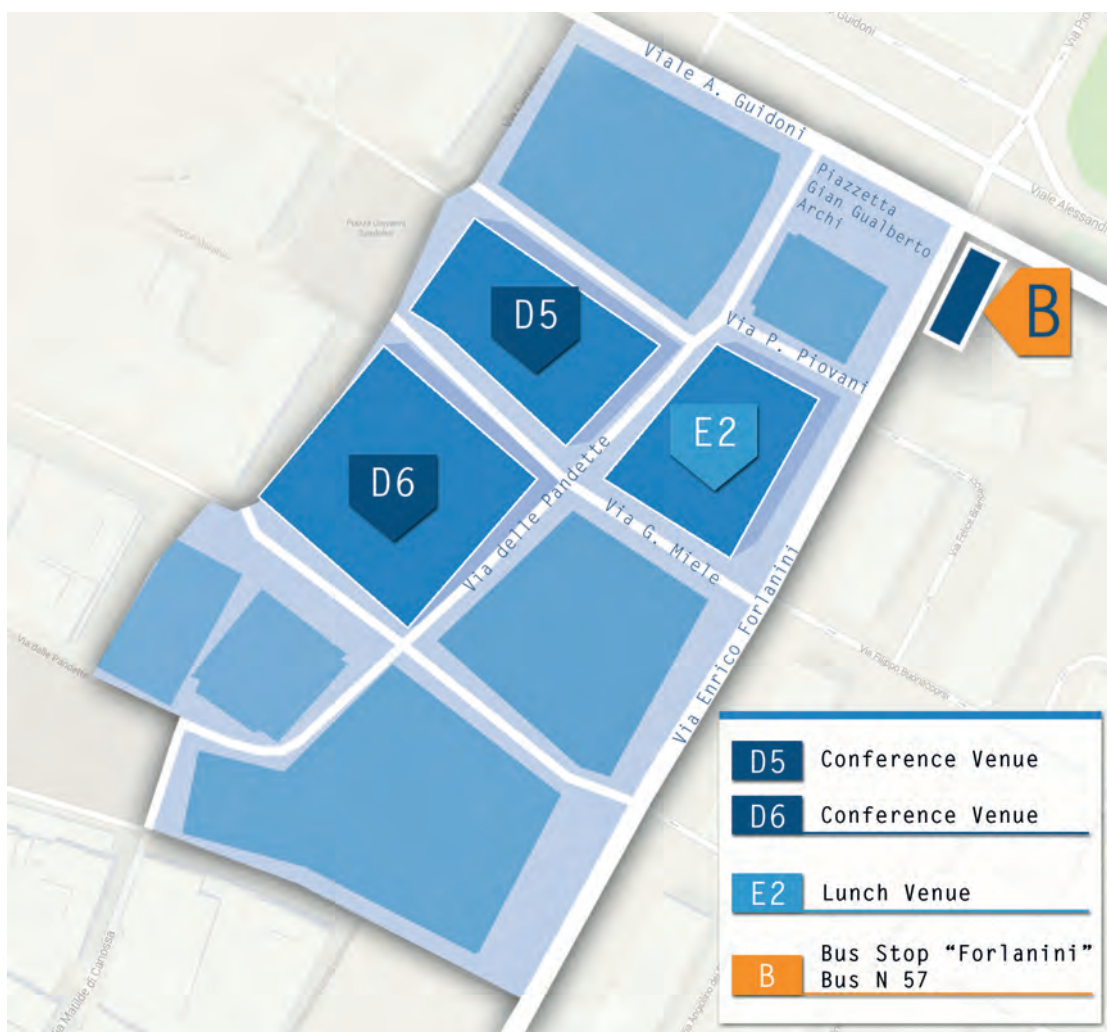

The Novoli Campus of the University of Florence is located in the area of Novoli.

To reach the Novoli Campus, take bus no. 57 from Firenze Santa Maria Novella Train station (bus stop: “Stazione Deposito Bagagli”) towards Sesto Fiorentino Mille and get off at the bus stop “Forlanini”. The bus ride takes about 30 minutes, and it is a 3 minutes’ walk from the bus stop to the conference venue.

Bus tickets (“biglietti”) must be bought before boarding and have to be stamped upon boarding the bus. Tickets are on sale at ATAF ticket kiosks and vending machines, tobacconists, newspaper kiosks, and some coffee bars.

A taxi ride from the city centre to Novoli costs about 15 euros. To book a taxi, call 055 4242 or 055 4798.

The Conference will take place in building D5 and D6 of the Novoli Campus.

European University Institute, Badia Fiesolana

Address: Via dei Roccettini 9, 50014 San Domenico di Fiesole, Italy

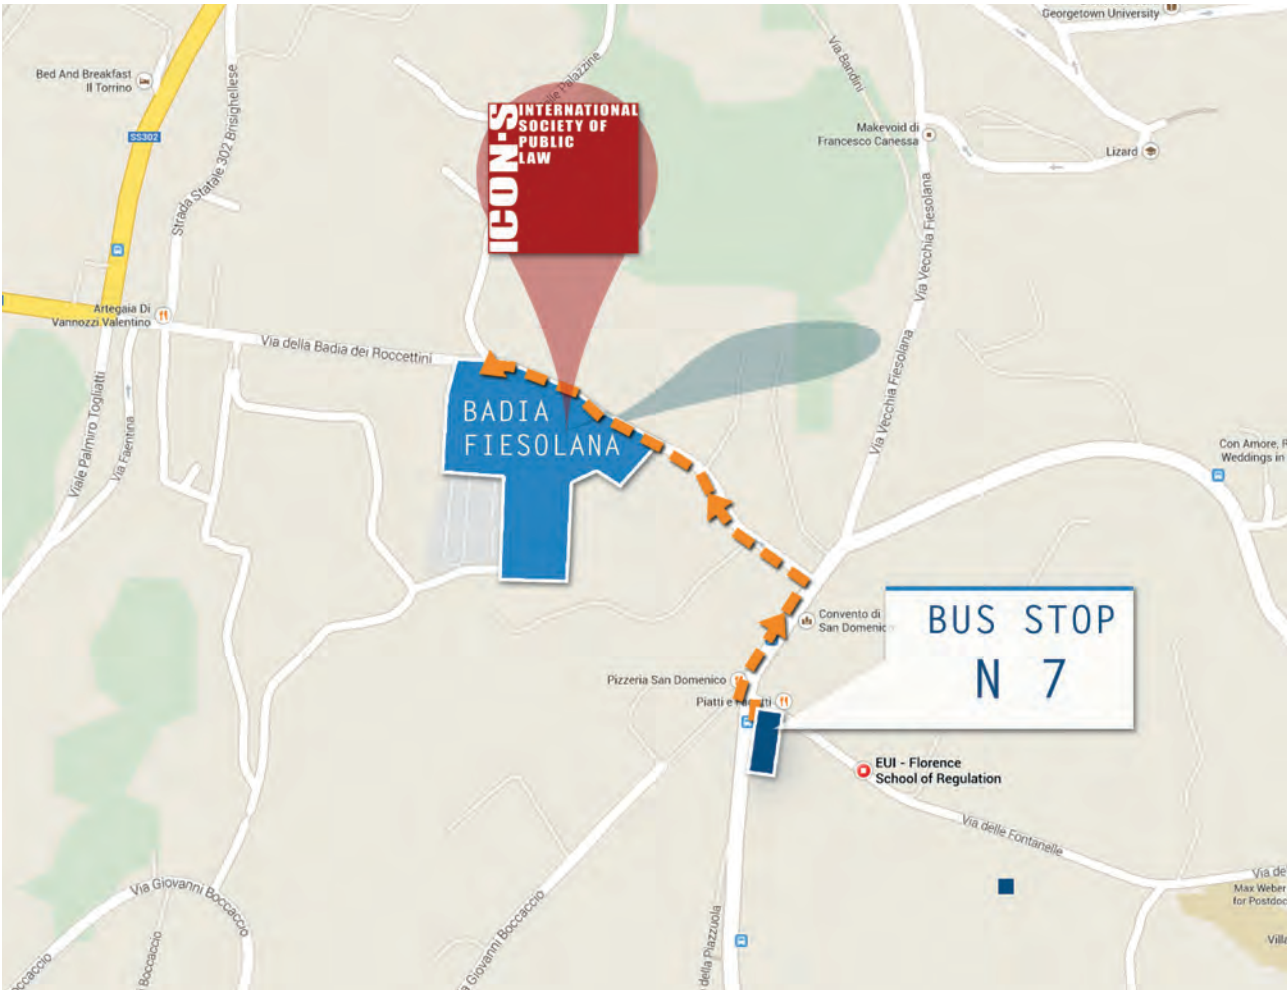

The European University Institute is located in the area of Fiesole.

To get to the European University Institute from the city centre of Florence, take bus no. 7 from Piazza San Marco (bus stop: “La Pira”) and get off at the bus stop “San Domenico 01.” The bus ride takes about 20 minutes.

To reach Badia Fiesolana from the bus stop “San Domenico 01,” cross the road, walk 50 metres in the direction of Fiesole (the same direction as the bus), and then take the first road to the left, opposite the church and the cemetery (Via dei Roccettini). It is a 5-10 minutes’ walk from the bus stop to the Badia Fiesolana.

Bus tickets (“biglietti”) must be bought before boarding and have to be stamped upon boarding the bus. Tickets are on sale at ATAF ticket kiosks and vending machines, tobacconists, newspaper kiosks, and some coffee bars.

A taxi ride from the city centre to the Badia Fiesolana costs about 20 euros. To book a taxi, call 055 4242 or 055 4798.
